Even Deacon White-Lackawanna's chamafter putting up his old pet five or six s in a week and twisting the tails of the points in a week and twisting the tails of the shorts in other stocks, has become a reactionist for a turn. He was selling calls on Reading at 71, good for to-morrow for a quarter of 1 per cent. This shows his position pretty well, although it is not to be inferred from this that the Deacon is a bear. On the contrary, he is said by his friends to be a big bull for a long pull, and there is little doubt that he will continue to carry lackawanna under his protecting wing and boost the stock when he thinks the proper time for a renewal of the upward movement has arrived.

St. Paul was put up nearly a point before the bears got a chance at it, and then they failed to wipe out the improvement. White personally bid for the stock around 78. There was a lively contest in Western Union and Reading, but both stocks held up well. The Wabashes were buoyant, and with the bonds scored higher figures on reports that the reorganization scheme would be agreed upon in all its details to-day. Pullman was another strong stock and rose 2 points. The "rights" were worth over 10. ths" were worth over 10.

The contest began shortly after 11 o'clock. The goose was the first dish served. When the word "go" was given Schroeder plunged a case-knife into the fowl and, dissecting it, set about his task. The reporters were somewhat ahead of him in this first part. After 9 minutes and 15 seconds of rapid eating they succeeded in demolishing their twelve-pounder. Scroeder finished 16 minutes later. The Rev. Mr. Elsing said that Miss Fream had been a disturbing element in the church, and that steps had been taken to suppress her. He did not wish the reporter to say that Miss Fream would be seized by a blue-coated minion of the law at the Tuesday night prayer-meeting, because the announcement would draw a big crowd in that lively neighborhood, nor would the arrest be made on Sunday, but the reporter inferred that Tuesday night was the only time that Miss Fream could be conveniently captured and locked up.

Upon the application of E. M. Fox, counse McGregor from disposing of the proceeds of the sale of his seat in the New York Stock Exchange or in any way interfering with the banking and brokerage firm of Armstrong & actions of the defendant.

On Jan. 12, 1887, the two formed a copartnership, under the title of Armstrong & McGregor, for the purpose of carrying on a general banking business to buy and sell the general banking business to buy and sell the securities dealt in at the Stock Exchange, and to buy and sell grain, cotton, oil and other things. Mr. Armstrong put $25,000 cash into the firm and McGregor put in his seat in the Stock Exchange. They were to continue the business until May I, 1888, but on Sept. I the firm sustained very heavy losses, and it was mutually agreed to wind up the business, and dissolve the co-partnership upon a settlement of their accounts and a discharge by sech sections. A rest was then taken. After fifteen minutes the men were ordered to finish. There then remained for the reporters about half a peck of potatoes. Schroeder's table had the same quantity of potatoes, and about four pounds of steak. At 1 o'clock time was called. The referee then announced that as neither side had accomplished their task he partnership upon a settlement of their accounts and a discharge by each partner of all indebtedness due by him to the firm.

In accordance with this understanding the defendant obtained Armstrong's consent to the sale of the Stock Exchange seat. This was accordingly sold to a third party for $21,500. As soon as the defendant got the money, Mr. Armstrong says, he refused to pay his indebtedness to the firm, which amounts to $1,041.28, as the books show, and abandoned the business entirely. He refused to listen to Armstrong when the money was demanded of him. The plaintiff has begun a suit fo: the dissolution of the copartnership and the appointment of a receiver. It is in this suit that McGregor has been enjoined.

winter after the adjournment of the State Legislature, which failed to elect a Senator. An extra session of the Legislature was convened soon afterwards to pass certain appropriation bills at this extra session. Judge Faulkner was elected Senator, but Mr. Lucas maintains that Judge Faulkner's election is void, owing to a provision in the State constitution confining the acts of a special session of the Legislature to the business it was called together to perform.

"I suppose," said Mr. Lucas, to-day, "that my case will follow the usual routine of reference to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and when it has been reported upon by that committee the Senate will give its judgment after thorough discussion and mature deliberation. As for myself, I hold the regular Gubernatorial certificate, whereas Judge Faulkner has merely a statement of official record, signed by the Governor. He has not the certificate that is required by the Constitution, and this is the vital difference between his case and mine. If I were to die to-morrow, the Senate could not in my opinion, swear in Judge Faulkner on the credentials which he now holds. I have not the slightest doubt of the legality of my position, and I do not see how the Senate can do otherwise than seat me if it desires to uphold the Constitution of the United States and of West Virginia. I have made a most thorough and exhaustive examination of the law and am satisfied that it is on my side."

Concerning the outlook in West Virginia politically, he said: "The position of West Virginia depends very much upon the course taken by the two parties. There are certain elements there which ought to be conciliated—the agricultural interests and the laboring classes, for instance. They hold the balance of power, and if their interests are consulted in Congressional legislation and otherwise, it is probable that the Democracy will hold the State. On the other hand, if these large interests are sacrificed and they become indifferent the State. On the other hand, if these l terests are sacrificed and they become indif-ferents the State will go Republican."

owing to a diversion that is sought by the Fitchburg Railroad.

Superintendent of Public Works Shanahan has received from the Fitchburg a request for permission to dig a basin and build a wharf on the Eric Canal, a quarter of a mile west of Lock No. 25, at Rotterdam Junction. It is for the purpose of receiving and delivering freight. The canal is 250 feet wide at this point, and the contemplated harbor of the railroad will be 200 feet wide by 2,000 feet long. The ground needed is on the south bank of the canal. The wharf will be furnished with a steam elevator and large sheds for freight other than grain, so that Eastern grain and merchandise can readily be transferred to the railroad or that for the South or West be loaded on boats. It is said that Supt. Shanahan is inclined to grant the request on the ground that the business of the canal will be largely increased if the plan is carried out. Merchants in Albany are much exercised over the scheme, which, they say, will take much freight to Boston which has hitherto gone to New York and Albany.

SERENADERS WHO WANTED MORE BEER. One of Them Shot by a Bride's Father at Milford, Mass. [SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.

MILPORD, Mass., Nov. 18.-Last evening John Colley, of Lawrence street, was shot in the right arm above the wrist while serenading a newly married couple, Miss Katie Carr and John Lawson, a Swede, an informal reception was being held at their residence. Towards 9 a crowd of perhaps two hundred boys and men congregated outside the house, determined to serenade the couple. In response to the serenade the father of the bride secured half a barrel of beer, which was drank in a few minutes. Towards 1 o'clock the crowd became thirsty and called for more beer. They were told that the beer was gone, but that only tended to enrage them, and for a time life was made a burden to the Carr family.

Carr determined to state the facts to the crowd. The crowd pressed in on him, and one fellow spat tobacco juice in his face, spoiling his boiled shirt. The unnappy father decided to send the crowd away, and pulling a 22-calibre Smith-Wesson revolver from his hip pocket, fired at the ground. As he did so Colley with others started to run, but was tripped by tuft-grass, and as he fell the bullet entered his right arm.

Young Sothern, however, has been playing at the Academy of Music to very large receipts, and, like other pretty actors, has been "taken up" socially. Sothern remains on his tour until May, when he returns to the Lyceum Theatre, taking the place of the regular stock company. There is a new play in view for him a comedy that was written for his father, although "The Highest Bidder" does not show symptoms of readiness for shelving. This being the first attraction sent from the Lyceum Theatre by Mr. Frohman, its success has been a source of great satisfaction to that gentleman. Sweatnam, Billy Rice and Barney Fagan's
"progressive" minstrels, now playing at Niblo's Garden, have not met with a very conspicuous degree of success there, although the company is a large one, and includes a goodly number of minstrel favorites. The fact, however, that it takes time to win New York's favor-in minstrelsy at any any rate—is demonstrated. William Foote, who was the "projector" of the Haverley Mastodon Minstrels, and who was engaged as manager of the company, left the organization a few weeks ago. Miss Estelle Clayton has written a play,

Miss Estelle Clayton has written a play, and it is to be presented at a special matinee at the Union Square Theatre very shortly, by arrangement with Manager J. M. Hill. The matinee will be for the benefit of Miss Sara Jewett. Miss Clayton claims that her play is entirely original, and some people who have read it were greatly impressed with its situations. As the performance is for the benefit of a sister artist, it is expected that a strong cast will volunteer service and give Miss Clayton's play a good opportunity. Miss Clayton has very small feet, as those who saw cast will volunteer service and give Miss Clayton's play a good opportunity. Miss Clayton has very small feet, as those who saw her in her barefooted rôle remember. It is now demonstrated that she has a very big head.

George Knight closes his engagement in New York on Saturday night. His performance of "Rudolph" is acknowledged to be artistic, but it has not met with the success which was hoped for it. When an actor declares that he made an artistic success, it always means that he has made a financial failure. Knight was extremely fortunate with a farce comedy called "Over the Garden Wall," and he thought he could successfully enter the field of legitimate comedy. At any rate he intends touring the principal cities with "Rudolph."

Up to noon the sales were only 165,000 shares. The change was welcomed by a large number off speculators and brokers who have done a rushing trade for over a week and are now quite willing to have a rest of a day or two.
